WARNING GRAPHIC CONTENT: Texas Rep Receives Christmas Card With Graphic Anti-Gun Material Inside

Jonathan Strickland, a member of the Texas House of Representatives, has posted a picture of his Facebook of what appeared to be a normal Christmas card that was sent to his home.

It all seemed innocent enough, until he opened it. He now thanks God that he opened it before his young children got ahold of it.

What vile, unhinged person does something like this? Truly despicable.

The note attached says the following:

The NRA gives the gift of nonfatal gunshot wounds like these to 100,000 Americans every year.

Your continued support of “guns everywhere” legislation is directly responsible for this health epidemic.

In your heart, do you honestly believe this is what Jesus wants?

Shame on you for dishonoring Jesus Christ with your support of gun-pushing legislation.

-The Betsy Riot

I looked in to these “Betsy Riot” folks. First off, let me tell you that the fact that they keep invoking Jesus is a really cheap trick on their part. I’ve taken a look at their website, and I have a distinct feeling they absolutely do not care what “Jesus wants.”

Here’s how these vile individuals describe themselves:

noun

/fək' thē in' är ā/

plural: betsyies, betsys, a riot of betsyies

1. a diversity-embracing, body-positive, sex-positive, historically aware person who has fucking had enough of gun culture and the death and terror it inflicts on America

2. a nonviolent act of civil disobedience against guns

verb

past tense: betsyied

to prank, lambaste, and generally fuck up gun culture

“That riot of betsyies betsyied the shit out of the gun show.”

You sound live a lovely group of swamp trolls. Also “/fək' thē in' är ā/” did y’all catch that? Fuck the NRA. How clever.

This is absolutely disgusting. These people are officially on my sh*t list.
